Palladium Equity Partners to Acquire Majority Stake in DME Express from WayPoint Capital Partners

March 20th, 2026

NEW YORK and THE WOODLANDS, Texas, March 20, 2026 /PRNewswire/ – Palladium Equity Partners, LLC (along with its affiliates, “Palladium”), today announced an agreement to acquire a majority equity interest in DME Express (“DME Express” or the “Company”), an established provider of durable medical equipment serving hospice providers across the United States. Palladium expects to partner alongside CEO Mark Borneleit and his founding team who continue to lead the business. The closing of the contemplated transaction is subject to the satisfaction of certain conditions.

DME Express would be Palladium’s second investment in the hospice industry since inception, and the second platform investment by Palladium Equity Partners VI, LP. Palladium will acquire a majority equity interest in DME Express from WayPoint Capital Partners (“WayPoint”), which will maintain a minority equity interest in the business.

The Company currently serves hospices and patients in 9 states through a network of 70+ warehouse locations. DME Express offers a broad suite of products, including beds, respiratory equipment, and mobility equipment, delivered under recurring per-patient-day contractual arrangements.

“DME Express represents an exciting opportunity to partner with an experienced founder-led management team in a specialized healthcare services segment that benefits from demographic tailwinds,” said Rafa Ortiz, Head of Services at Palladium. “I believe the Company’s differentiated service model, operating footprint, and strong customer relationships position it well for continued growth and align with our prior investment experience in home health and hospice services,” said Daniel Ilundain, President of Palladium.

Mark Borneleit, Founder and Chief Executive Officer of DME Express, said, “We are excited about our upcoming partnership with Palladium. Their prior experience in the hospice industry and working with founders seeking to scale their businesses makes them a strong partner to achieve our next phase of growth. We look forward to collaborating together after the closing to expand our geographic footprint, enhance our service capabilities, and pursue strategic acquisitions to better serve hospice providers and the patients they support.”

Philip Edmunds, Managing Partner at WayPoint Capital Partners, said, “We are very proud of the growth DME Express has achieved under WayPoint’s stewardship and the strong platform the team has built. Palladium will bring relevant sector experience that we believe will support the Company’s next phase of expansion. Waypoint is excited to continue its support of DME Express after the closing as a minority investor alongside Palladium.”

Cain Brothers, a division of KeyBanc Capital Markets and Holland & Knight served as financial and legal advisors, respectively, to DME Express. Edgemont Partners and Morrison & Foerster served as financial and legal advisors, respectively, to Palladium. Terms of the investment were not disclosed.
